Subscale	Mark (1-5)	Commentary
Content	1	This review focusses on what you learnt about your own life rather than what you learnt about the author's life. You miss the second key point of the review which is 'why this person made their important contribution'. If you make it more clear that you are addressing this point in your answer and if you change the main subject of the review from yourself to the author, you will get higher marks.

Communicative Achievement	4	The conventions of review writing are used well. There are clear paragraphs and a strong conclusion which leaves the reader wanting to read this book. Adding a title to the review would be a good addition. The register and tone are consistent with writing a review, slightly informal with a subjective tone 'Sounds easy, but it is not.' You back up your statements with evidence and expand your points well. The clear paragraphing and strong introduction and conclusion help to keep the reader engaged and help with the overall flow of the review.

Organisation	4	This review is well organised with clear paragraphing which help main points are clearly introduced: 'on the one hand', 'on the other hand'. You introduce the broader ideas well in the introduction 'I realised something in my life had to change' you then get more specific talking about adopting the 'morning person routine' and creating blocks in your calendar. You then go back to the main idea in the conclusion that your

		'daily routine had changed a lot'.
Language	2	There is a range of relevant vocabulary and this is used to communicate the ideas well. There is a good attempt at using simple and more complex grammatical structures, including less common words and phrases 'no sooner...'. There are some errors with the language and sometimes these can hinder the flow of the writing and make it tricky for the reader to follow the passage easily. You have used good informal language, appropriate for a
